

Declaration of Brno

We, the participants of the first edition of the National Crime Prevention Days, hereby declare:

Our willingness for further cooperation among all entities dealing with the issue of crime and its prevention.

We support mutual meetings of a wide range of prevention entities through continuation of the National Prevention Days platform.

We encourage central bodies, regional, municipal and local authorities, schools, institutes and institutions and non-governmental non-profit sector to support such meetings.

We support further development of cooperation with the non-governmental sector, which we consider to be an essential pillar of civil society and irreplaceable implementer of numerous helpful projects that are beneficial for crime prevention.

We call for a larger support for scientific research in the area of criminology, continuous professional analysis of causes and conditions of crime and the perception of security among citizens at the local level, and for more effective use of these findings in development of particular prevention programmes as well as conceptual and strategic documents related to crime prevention.

We express our wish for crime prevention to be systematically and permanently embedded in our legal system.

In relation with security threats and challenges, we intend to continue innovating and developing our activities at all levels and call for adequate financial support for prevention activities.

In our professional and private life, we intend to strive to bring about a safe society where nobody's life, health or property is threatened or subject to blackmail.